Jonathan Potter traveled from Summersville to compete in the 12th Annual Stonewall Classic bass tournament in September. He landed the biggest fish in the popular 2 day tournament. His largemouth bass weighed 6 pound, 2 ounces.

Archery season is on and if you harvest a big buck with a cross-bow or compound bow, send it to the form info on page 38.

2022 Archery Season Dates

SOUTH CHARLESTON, W.VA. —The West Virginia Division of Natural Resources is reminding hunters to start preparing for the opening of the state's archery and crossbow seasons for white-tailed deer, black bear and wild boar.

The popular seasons will open on Sept. 24 and run through Dec. 31. Hunters are also reminded to purchase their license and stamps at wvhunt.com before the season starts.

Deer

Hunters may take up to two deer in one day during the archery or crossbow seasons, but only one antlered deer may be taken on the same day during any season. The first deer does not have to be electronically checked before harvesting the second deer on the same day.

Hunters who wish to harvest additional deer during the archery or crossbow seasons must purchase a Class RB or RRB stamp before Sept. 24. One or two additional archery or crossbow deer, depending on the county, may be taken with a archery deer stamp, for a total of one deer per stamp. West Virginia residents and senior hunters must buy a Class RB on their own property and Class DT license holders are not required to purchase additional archery stamps.

Hunters are reminded that Logan, McDowell, Mingo and Wyoming counties are under special regulations. In these counties, only two archery deer may be taken, one of which must be antlerless. In 10 additional counties or portions thereof, hunters must take an antlerless deer in any regular deer season before harvesting a second antlered deer in that county.

Bear

Two bears may be taken per year, provided at least one bear is taken in Boone, Fayette, Kanawha, Logan, McDowell, Mingo, Nicholas, Raleigh or Wyoming counties. The daily bag limit for bear is one per day.

Resident bear hunters are required to purchase a base license and a bear damage stamp (Class DS) to hunt bear unless otherwise exempt from having a license. Nonresident bear hunters must purchase a bear hunting license (Class EE), a conservation/law enforcement stamp (CS/LE) and a Class DS stamp. Nonresidents hunting on national forest land must also purchase a National Forest stamp (Class I).

Wild Boar

The wild boar archery and crossbow seasons are open in Boone, Logan, Raleigh and Wyoming counties to resident hunters only. The season bag limit is one wild boar and no application is required. A second split of the wild boar archery and crossbow seasons will open Feb. 3-5, 2023. To hunt in the February wild boar season, hunters will need a 2023 hunting license when they become available to purchase.

For more information about West Virginia's hunting seasons and hunting regulations, download a copy of the 2022-2023 West Virginia Hunting and Trapping Regulations Summary at wvdnr.gov.

Weird Hunting Facts

After breaking up with his girlfriend, Justin Vernon (Bon Iver) wrote 'For Emma, Forever Ago' in his father's remote hunting cabin. He hunted deer for food, once having to trade venison to afford repairing his guitar. After months in relative solitude he emerged, having recorded all 9 songs.

Boa constrictor is a carnivore (meat-eater). While they are young, boa constrictors eat smaller prey, like rats, mice and squirrels. When they reach adult size, they start to hunt and eat larger prey, such as monkeys, wild boars and deer.

Bobcats are carnivores (meat-eaters). They prefer rabbits, but their diet also includes rodents, birds, lizards, snakes and carrion. During the winter, bobcats hunt larger prey, such as deer.

Wolverines are omnivores (they eat both meat and vegetation). During the summer season, when different types of plants, berries and roots are available, wolverine expands its normal diet with plants. Even during summer time, wolverine cannot survive without meat. They eat rabbits, mice, porcupines, squirrels, but they also hunt injured deer and caribou.

Afghan Hound was used for hunting of deer, wild goats, gazelles, wild boars, hares, wolves, snow leopards and falcons in the past. Unlike their ancestors, modern Afghan Hounds are much slower and rarely used for hunting.

Deer are a favorite food of the Komodo dragon and in an effort to increase their population the government began prohibiting deer hunting by the islanders.

Harpy eagle is a carnivore (meat-eater). It hunts and eats sloths, monkeys, baby deer, coati mundis, javelinas, agoutis, porcupines, armadillos, raccoons and parrots.

Wolves are ultimate predators that do not have natural enemies. They are meat eaters who hunt goats, sheep, deer, moose and other larger and smaller prey.

Lynx is a carnivore (meat-eater). It usually hunts small mammals, such as snowshoe hare, mice and squirrels, and birds. Larger species of lynx often hunt bigger animals, such as deer.

In North America, people hunt, with the intention to eat, birds and waterfowl, turkeys, deer, moose, bear, elk, caribou, bison, bighorn sheep, rabbit, squirrel, beaver, and other animals.

Hunting strategy depends on the type of prey they are chasing. If coyote hunt a small prey, it will hunt alone. If the prey of choice is larger animal, such as deer, group of coyotes (composed of several animals) will join their forces to kill the prey. Coyotes are the most active during the dawn and the English Foxhounds were bred as part of a 16th-century conservation effort during King Henry VIII's reign. Because deer populations were depleting, partially due to nobles hunting them for sport, the fox was chosen as a new prey. Foxhounds were a blend of Greyhound, Fox Terrier and Bulldog. - source Akita dog was initially created to guard and protect Shoguns of noble houses in Japan and to track and hunt fowl, wild boars, black bears and deer. It hunts silently, using the same stalking techniques as tiger.

The Navajo hunted for small game, antelope, and deer. When the Spanish arrived they brought goats and sheep and the Navajo began to raise livestock.

Deer (etc.) jump high into the air as a signal to predators that the jumper isn't worth hunting.

Ainu dog was initially created to facilitate hunting of salmon, deer and bears, and to protect people from large animals.

Deer hunting is called "Deer stalking" in the UK. "Deer hunting"(UK) uses scent hounds and horses.

The reason hunting jackets are neon orange is cause deer can't see that color.

Venison is a term used for the meat of a game animal killed by hunting. Primarily referring to that of a deer, the term venison can also be used to describe hares, wild pigs, antelope, and certain species of goats and ibex.

Wildcat is a carnivore (meat-eater). Its diet is based on rodents, birds, reptiles, insects and spiders. It occasionally hunts large prey such as rabbits, small deer and antelopes. Wildcat eats entire prey, including the feathers, fur and bones.

One of the first examples of mass produced art was a carving on an ancient hunting weapon that included a deer watching itself poop. The Hopi were also hunters, with the men hunting antelope, small game, and deer for food. They used tools such as traps, and large sticks as weapons to hunt.

Wildlife Action Plan. These species inhabit a variety of habitats, from meadows to shrubby thickets and groves of young saplings to mature forests, which are also preferred by species like ruffed grouse, whip-poor-will, white-tailed deer and wild turkey.

Professional biologists, foresters and conservation planners are available to develop individualized conservation plans based on each landowner's objectives and the identified needs of the land. Every conservation plan is unique but may include removing problematic plants, establishing desirable plants, thinning trees from overstocked forests, adjusting the type and timing of current management practices and creating natural structures such as brush piles, where wildlife can nest, forage and take shelter.

Coyote Night Hunting Update

SOUTH CHARLESTON, W.VA.

— The West Virginia Natural Resources Commission approved updates to the regulations for coyote night hunting. Using any color artificial light or night vision technology, including image intensification, thermal imaging or active illumination, for coyote hunting in West Virginia is permitted between Sept. 1 and Dec. 31 on private land.

Hunting coyotes at night requires written permission from the landowner and prior notification to the local Natural Resources Police Officer or the DNR District Office during normal business

Telephone Black Bear Survey

BECKLEY, W.VA. — The West Virginia Division of Natural Resources is conducting a scientific study on black bears and black bear management that will involve telephone surveys of residents.

In the coming weeks, state residents may receive a phone call from Responsive Management, a research firm contracted by the WVDNR to conduct the study, asking them to participate in a brief telephone survey about black bears and black bear management.

Residents will be selected at random, which is necessary to maintain a scientifically valid study. If you receive a call at home or on your cell phone regarding this study, please consider participating to assist the agency in better understanding opinions on issues related to black bears in West Virginia. Residents may also receive a text message with a link to the survey.

This study builds on previous surveys to assess attitudes toward black bears the WVDNR and Responsive Management conducted in 2017, 2012 and 2006. The study will include an analysis of trends in opinions and attitudes. The data will then be used to update the state's Black Bear Management Plan.

Responsive Management is an internationally recognized public

Smallmouth Feeding

By Michael Iaconelli

All black bass species rely on the same four senses to keep their bellies full. I'm referring mainly to sight, sound, vibration and smell. A lot of bass anglers assume largemouth and smallmouth use these senses the same way. They don't.

It's really important that you know the difference when you're trying to get a bass to eat an artificial bait.

Largemouth feed primarily by vibration and sound. Smallmouth feed primarily by sight and smell. Those are important distinctions to remember. When I'm picking baits for smallmouth, two things top the list. One, does the bait appeal to a smallmouth's sense of smell? Two, is the bait's color realistic and easy to see?

Smell

Berkley has been on the cutting edge of the smell and scent revolution for decades. They started with PowerBait. Then came Gulp! Now they've evolved to PowerBait MaxScent. Many other companies have created scented baits and application scents as well.

When I'm smallmouth fishing, I never, never, never ever throw a a soft plastic bait that is not scented. It's that important. Yes, largemouth and the other black bass species use their sense of smell, but not as a primary feeding response like smallmouth do.

I've done many taste tests while fishing with friends and even co-anglers where one of us will fish a scented bait and the other a non-scented bait. Whoever is fishing the scented bait typically gets three times as many bites. The right scent can actually draw a smallmouth to the bait.

When I left home for the recent Elite tournament on Lake Oahe, I had two dozen rods in my boat locker rigged with a wide variety of MaxScent baits. They included the Flat Worm, Hit Worm, The General, Lil' General, Tube and more.

Sight

Smallmouth utilize their eyes more than any other species of bass. They have to see the bait to eat it. I consider three things when I'm picking a lure that will catch a smallmouth's eye.

The first is color. In clear water you really have to dial in the color of whatever the smallmouth are feeding on. Depending on where and when you're fishing, that could be things like herring, gobies, crawfish or yellow perch. The cleaner the water, the more closely you've got to match the hatch, so to speak.

On the other hand, I often use shock colors to draw bass from a distance. A shock color doesn't mimic anything in particular, it's just a bright color that smallmouth can see from far away. Colors like bright chartreuse, bright white, bright orange and bubble gum can create an aggressive response, especially when smallmouth are in groups.

Fishing conditions are number two on my mind. Low early morning and late evening light, and cloudy, rainy conditions tend to be good for largemouth bass. That's not what you want for smallmouth. You'll catch more smallies on sunny, slick, calm water. These conditions allow the bass to see your lures better. Some of the best smallmouth days of my life – 30 to 50 fish days – were under those conditions.

My third consideration has to do with speed and rate of fall. I put those hand in hand. Speed is how fast you retrieve a bait. The rate of fall is how fast a lure sinks on a semi-slack line.

Although the best conditions for smallmouth bass are calm and bright sun, the downside is that they are more likely to distinguish that your lure is a fraud. You can use speed and rate of fall to counter that.

With a lot of my smallmouth fishing, I want that bait coming in fast, such as speed cranking, burning a spinnerbait and working a jerkbait or topwater faster than you would with other bass species.

I increase the rate of fall by using heavier weights with drop-shot rigs, tubes, Ned rigs, micro jigs and other sinking lures. The smallmouth don't get a good look at a bait that sinks fast and attack reflexively.

You can learn more about how I fish for smallmouth and other techniques at www.mikeiaconelli.com or www.youtube.com/c/goingike.

Green Bank Hunting

SOUTH CHARLESTON, W.VA. — A special resident-only controlled deer hunt at the Green Bank Observatory in Green Bank, W.Va. has been scheduled for Oct. 28-29 and Nov. 3-4, the Observatory and West Virginia Division of Natural Resources announced today.

All hunters who wish to apply must do so online at wvhunt.com. Applications must be submitted by midnight on Aug. 29. Hunters that do not already have an account will need to create one before applying.

After logging into their DNR account, hunters should select "Enter a Lottery Drawing" on the home screen and select the day or days they would like to apply for by selecting "Add." Once a selection is made, click "Proceed to Checkout."

To complete the application, select "Complete" and choose either "individual" or "party" (up to four members in a party including the captain) then select archery/crossbow or shotgun/muzzleloader under the hunt locations and click "Save." Make sure to check the box agreeing to the terms for purchase. There will be no charge to hunt but select "Pay Now" to apply for the hunt.

Successful applicants will be notified by mail and issued a special letter of authorization from the Observatory with detailed instructions and regulations. Only hunters who have made an application and have received a letter for a particular day or days may hunt. Walk-ons will not be permitted to hunt.

The four days of controlled hunts continue to page 36

will take place within delineated areas ranging in size from 132 acres to 1,000 acres. The maximum bag limit during the hunt is one antlerless deer per day. Additionally, an onsite lottery will be held each day of the hunt and five hunters will be selected to hunt an either-sex deer. Deer harvested on the site do not count toward the hunter's annual licensed deer bag limit. However, participating hunters must possess an appropriate base West Virginia hunting license or be exempt from having to purchase a license.

Due to the nature of the work at the observatory, gasoline-powered vehicles are strictly controlled on the site. Hunters may park only in designated parking areas, and all vehicles will be issued a pass that must be displayed on the windshield. Transportation from hunter check-in to some hunt areas will be provided by the GBO. For purposes of safety and biological study of harvested deer, all hunters must pass through the check-in station each morning before the day's hunt. At the end of the day's hunt, all hunters must
